The world is suffering from panic because of a small virus that is so locked up in many countries.

Thousands of cities are deprived of operational businesses, schools, colleges, universities, shopping malls, thousands of people have died or airport workers who are operational are carrying out the worst screening of travellers. Source; The central city of China has been designated Wuhan, the world has not yet fully understood whether the corona virus 'actually exists'. However, the World Health Organization has warned the whole world that the number of victims is increasing in 200 countries around the world. It is suspected that the virus spreads through the Chinese marine market where aquatic life is also traded.

What is the Corona virus?

The answer to this question is not easy, but according to the World Health Organization (WHO), corona viruses are a family of more than one virus, causing common cold to more serious illnesses, such as the Middle East Respiratory Syndrome (MERS).) And severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS).

These viruses are usually transmitted through animals to humans. For example, with reference to SARS, it is said that Cats Civet, a special breed of cats, known as Musk Blau and Garbabad, etc., is used for bats, snakes, dogs and this type of animal soup. Some people also believed that it was transmitted from a particular breed of camel to a human being.

There are still many corona viruses that are found in animals but humans have not been infected yet. Chinese authorities on January 7 diagnosed a corona virus of the family named Covid 19 and had never been diagnosed in humans before. Little is known about this virus, but it is certain that it is transmitted from person to person. The main sign of the symptoms is that patients with corona virus have difficulty breathing, fever , Cough and other respiratory diseases. The serious nature of the virus can cause kidney failure, pneumonia and even death.

How dangerous can it be?

Experts say that the Corona virus is not as dangerous as another type of virus that has killed around 800 people worldwide during 2002 and that the virus has spread from China to Thailand while 4 to the south. Hundreds of cases were also reported in Korea, Taiwan, Japan and the United States. The people who found the virus were either from Wuhan or have been in Wuhan in the past.

What is being done to prevent the virus from spreading?

China has alleged that the virus as a biological weapon, has been left by the US to harm China's economy in consultation with some of its allied countries.

After China, countries such as Iran, the United States, the United Kingdom, France, Spain have been severely affected by the corona virus in China and Italy. More than 53,000 people are now infected with the Corona virus.

While hundreds of people have been affected in Iran too, the government in the US has warned that the death toll could exceed 100,000. Killing 34 people, including a doctor Osama himself in Pakistan, so every citizen will take precautionary measures.

Because no vaccine has been developed for the virus so far, people have been convinced that they cannot go anywhere without a specific purpose. The World Health Organization has declared it a global public health problem, and further steps will be taken to prevent it. According to the World Health Organization's recommendations, people should wash their hands with soap and use a mask and gloves and in the case of illness, use medication in consultation with a doctor. Caution is the only solution to caution in the social distancing of citizens.
